"Lord, make me a channel of thy peace—
that where there is hatred, I may bring love—
that where there is wrong, I may bring the spirit of forgiveness—
that where there is discord, I may bring harmony—
that where there is error, I may bring truth—
that where there is doubt, I may bring faith—
that where there is despair, I may bring hope—that where there are shadows, I may bring light—
that where there is sadness, I may bring joy.
Lord, grant that I may seek rather to comfort than to be comforted—
to understand, than to be understood—
to love, than to be loved.
For it is by self-forgetting that one finds.
It is by forgiving that one is forgiven.
It is by dying that one awakens to eternal life.
Amen."

Most Thankful

It was Thanksgiving 34 years ago, and I was 21. We were all gathering, as we always did, at my maternal grandmother and grandfather's home in Central City, Kentucky. I always looked forward to seeing my cousins, aunts and uncles. I also enjoyed visiting my Uncle Tommy, who was quadriplegic and probably my favorite relative. I always loved being with my grandparents, as I had spent much of my childhood with them. Their home in Central City was my refuge, my sanctuary. And especially during Thanksgiving it was a fun sanctuary. But this particular Thanksgiving in 1984, I was deeply lost in my addiction to alcohol.

I was supposed to arrive early that afternoon, but I chose drinking with friends instead of leaving on time. I stopped several times on the drive down to have a few more drinks. There were no cell phones at the time, so I called from pay phones at truck stops with phony excuses about why I was running behind. I arrived long after dark and too late to visit with my Uncle Tommy, a tradition he and I had every Thanksgiving eve.

I still remember what I was wearing: a blue pullover sweat suit top and jeans. I looked grungy and felt grungy because I was grungy. I tried to clean up just before arriving, gulping down coffee and putting eyedrops in my eyes. It was a routine I was used to that never worked as well as I wanted to believe.

When I finally got to my grandparents' home, everyone seemed happy to see me, but I noticed a subtle concern in their eyes. I tried to make up in charm and humor what I had lost in integrity and self-respect. I sat at the dinner table and explained to family members interested in listening my made-up story about why I was nearly six hours late. But it was all just another story. It was just one more time I was bringing sadness and concern to a family gathering rather than something pleasant or hopeful. I had a large bottle of scotch hidden in my overnight bag and throughout the evening would slip back to my bedroom to sneak a few drinks. The next morning when everyone was saying goodbye, I was nowhere to be found. I was sitting alone in my car in the driveway, listening to music to block out everyone and everything. Alcoholism is a lonely disease.

The reason that Thanksgiving is my most memorable is that it was the day I was most disgusted with the person I had allowed myself to become. Disgusted enough to never want to repeat it. A short time after that weekend, I agreed to get help for my drinking, and I've been an active member of AA ever since. For the past 33 Thanksgivings, I've been present and sober and most importantly, able to be myself and, I hope, adding to rather than subtracting from our family's festivities.

I mention this on our national holiday for giving thanks because many of us today may not be feeling very thankful at all. Some may feel lost and alienated or full of self-loathing or despair. That may not be a bad thing. The bottom can sometimes also be a wonderful beginning. If you are struggling with addiction, Thanksgiving can be a time when you finally decide to make a change in your life, possibly a dramatic change. And if you do, this seemingly sad holiday moment may become the Thanksgiving you are one day, like me, the most thankful for.
